Background
 The students face difficulties in English vocabulary. Most of the students feel that English is the most difficult lesson to be learned. Then, the teacher conducts less communicative class. The teacher is not able to optimize media and never uses anything media.

Benefits of the Research
 This research can motivate students to study English through Hangman game. The teachers also can improve their ability to make innovation, effective strategies, and scenario of teaching vocabulary. Then, for other research will get a good result related to teaching vocabulary.

Method of the Research
 Based on the framework of the theories above, I use quantitative method to approach this subject. This research is conducted by applying Classroom Action Research. It is designed to help the teacher to find out what happen in the class and use the information to take action for the future improvement of the teaching-learning process.

Framework of Theories
 I collect the data based on the procedure of Classroom Action Research, namely Cycle I and Cycle II. The Cycle I and The Cycle II is also carried out in two meetings. Each cycle has four steps namely Planning, Action, Observation, and Reflection.

Result of the Research
 It can be said that the result is still poor. But, in second cycle, it shows that the students' achievement is 98. There is improving achievement than previous cycle. It means that Hangman Games can improve students' vocabulary achievement. So, this Classroom Action Research effectiveness of Hangman Games to improve students' vocabulary achievement to the Grade Nine students at Grow English Course is success.

THE UGLY DUCKLING

PART I

It was a beautiful summer out in the country. A mother duck sat in her nest among the grass and weeds, waiting for her eggs to hatch. She was feeling a little sorry for herself because she had been sitting alone for a long time and no one had come to visit her.

One day, her eggs began to crack and little yellow ducklings came out quacking loudly. “How lovely my ducklings look,” the mother duck smiled and gave each duckling a kiss. Then she saw that the biggest egg had not hatched yet. “Oh no,” she wailed and sat down again, feeling very disappointed.

“Hello! How are you?” asked an old duck who had come to pay her a visit. “Not well! I’m not well at all! This last egg just won’t crack!” replied the mother duck. “I’m so tired of sitting on it.” Just then the big egg cracked and out came a big grey duckling. The mother duck and the old duck stared at it.

“Oh my goodness!” cried the mother duck. She was shocked, “My goodness indeed!” What an ugly duckling!” exclaimed the old duck. “He’s grey and ugly.” “He doesn’t look like the others. Can he really be my duckling?” the mother duck asked, looking worried. “Well, push him into the water. See if he can swim like the others,” said the old duck.

So the mother duck went down to the river with her ducklings. She threw herself into the water with a splash. “Quack! Quack” she called. One duckling after another threw himself into the water. Soon they were all swimming in the river, even the ugly duckling. How well he swims! He’s really my own duckling. Quack! Quack! “She called and smiled at the ugly duckling.

After their swim, the mother duck led her family into the farmyard. There was an awful riot going on there. Two families of cats were fighting over an eel’s head. The ugly duckling and his brothers and sisters quickly hid behind their mother.

“Don’t be afraid,” said the mother duck. “Just use your legs. Make sure you can run and swim. Now get going and say hello to the other ducks.” “Quack!” said all the ducklings.

The other ducks looked at them and said loudly, "Look how ugly that grey duckling is!" We don't want him here!" A black and brown duck flew over and bit the ugly duckling on the neck. "Ouch!" the ugly duckling cried out in pain and hid behind his mother. "Oh, do leave him alone!" said the mother duck. "Don't peck at him!" "But he's so big and ugly. That's reason enough to peck at him", retorted the black and brown duck.

An old duck with a rag on her leg waddled up. "Your ducklings are all lovely, except this big and ugly fellow," she said. "Oh, please don't say that," said the mother duck. "He may not be handsome, but he's got a good heart. And he swims better than the others. He's a fine strong duckling. "And the mother duck stroked her ugly duckling's head

The ugly duckling smiled happily at his mother. At least his mother loved him. However, as the days went by, the other ducks, and even the chickens, bullied him. Every day the ducks bit him, the chickens pecked at him, and the girl who fed them kicked him. The ugly duckling hid under the bushes and cried because no one liked him.

One day the poor unhappy duckling flew away. Over the fields he flew till he came to a great marsh where the grass grew tall and wild. Scared and lonely, he hid among the grass that night. The next morning, some wild ducks found him.

“What kind of duck are you?” they asked. “My, how very ugly you are. Don’t marry into our family.”

The ugly duckling nodded, feeling lonelier than ever. Bang! Bang! Suddenly, there were two gunshots. Two of the wild ducks fell dead. Hunting dogs, barking loudly, rushed through the marsh. The ugly duckling was terrified. He put his head under his wing and shivered. When all was quiet again, the ugly duckling left the marsh as fast as he could.

THE UGLY DUCKLING

PART II

A terrible storm was blowing. The ugly duckling was cold and wet. He wandered into a little hut. An old woman lived there with her tomcat and hen.

“Can you lay eggs?” the hen asked.

“No,” answered the ugly duckling.

“Then you shouldn’t talk when we’re talking,” said the hen.

“Can you arch your back and purr?” asked the tomcat.

“No, sir,” replied the ugly duckling.

“Then you’re quite useless, aren’t you?” the tomcat laughed.

“Yes, he’s useless and ugly,” the hen agreed.

The ugly duckling felt unwanted. So the next day he left the hut. He found a lake where he could swim. There were other ducks living around the lake, but they ignored him because he was so ugly.

Then autumn came and the leaves on the trees turned yellow. The sky turned grey and the clouds were heavy with snow. The ugly duckling was cold and lonely. Then, one evening, a flock of handsome white swans flew over the lake. The ugly duckling had never seen any bird so beautiful before, and he longed to be as handsome as the swans.

As the days grew colder in winter, the ugly duckling had to swim faster in the water to keep it from turning into ice. He had to move his legs all the time. Finally he was too tired to move.

The next morning a farmer found the frozen duckling and carried him home. Inside the warm house, the ugly duckling felt better. The farmer's children tried to play with him. But the ugly duckling was so frightened they were going to hurt him that he flew right into the milk pan and splashed milk all over the room. The Farmer's wife screamed at him. Then he flew into the butter tub and fell into a barrel of flour.

The children chased him all over the room. Fortunately the door of the house was open. The ugly duckling ran out and hid among the snow-covered bushes.

All through winter the ugly duckling suffered misery and hardship and he thought he was going to die. However, one day, the sun shines warmly again, Soon it was spring and the leaves on the trees turned green. The ugly duckling flapped his wings. He flew into a garden which had a large pond with three white swans swimming.

When the ugly duckling saw them, he was filled with sadness. He flew towards them and said, "Kill me." Then he bent his head down to the water, waiting for the swans to peck at him. But when he saw what was in the water, he could not believe his eyes. He was no longer a big clumsy grey bird. Instead he had turned into a splendid white swan. The other swans swam around him and stroked him with their beaks.

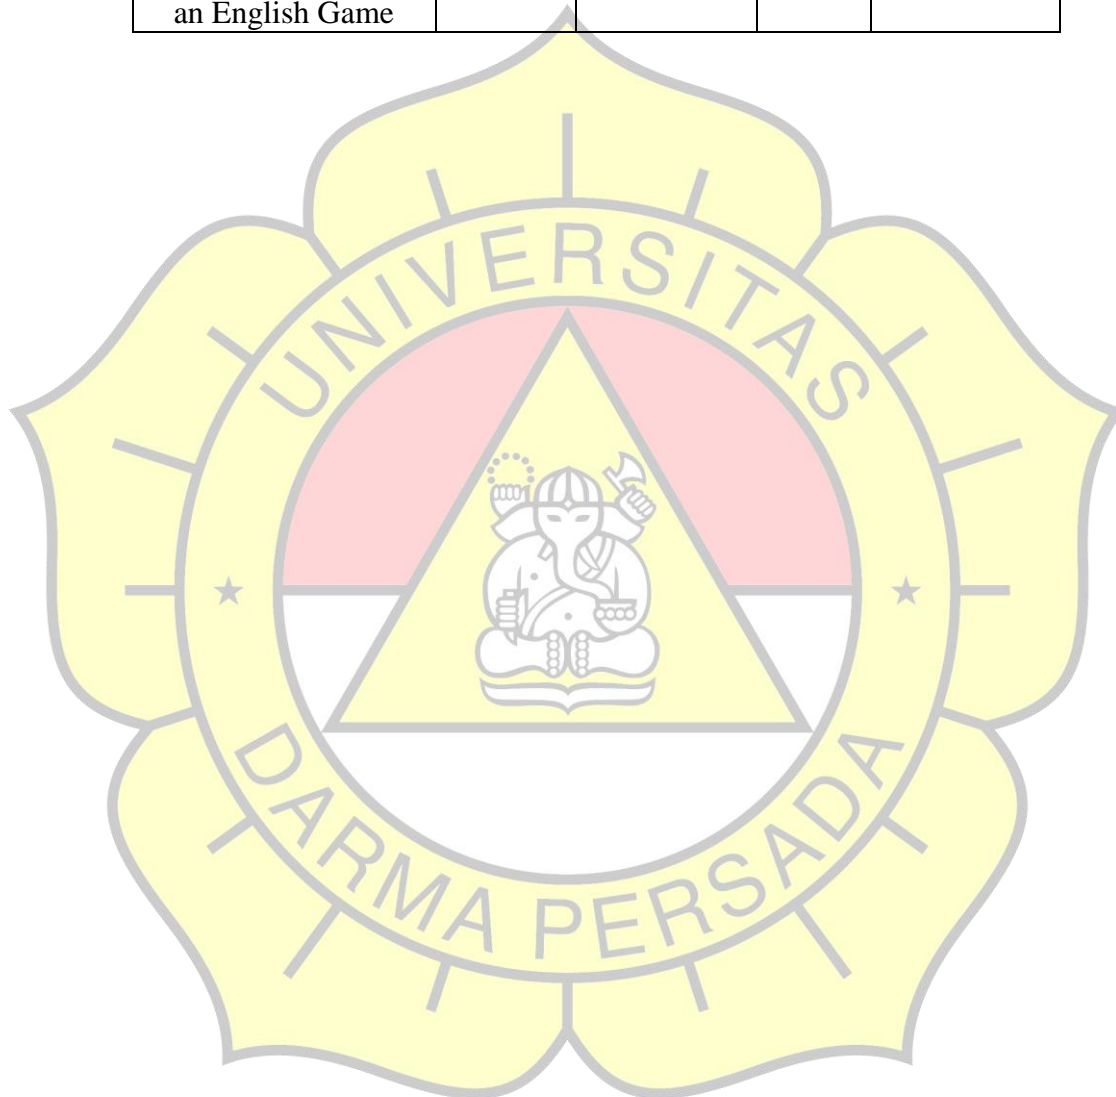

Some children came to the pond and said, “Look! The new swan is the most splendid-looking swan of all! He’s so young and handsome.”

The new swan felt shy and hid his head under his wings. He thought of how he had been called “Ugly” by the ducks and the chickens. Yet here were children saying that he was the most splendid bird of all. His heart sang with joy. “I never dreamt of so much happiness when I was the ugly duckling,” he sighed.
