CONCLUSION

Based on the analysis of chapters III, through intrinsic approach which consisting of characterization by showing and telling methods, plot, and setting and after elaborate on the result of the analysis with the extrinsic approach which consist of the concept of theory of love, I can conclude that What They Had movie script by Elizabeth Chomko reflects the theory of love.

Nobert Everhardt and Ruth O'Shea as the most appearing characters, display the reflection of theory of love through their actions and characteristics. At the beginning of the script, we see Ruth goes out from their home, and walk in the snowstrom. She goes out because she has Alzheimer. Bert calls Nick to help finding her. Bert does not want to tell Bridget because he thinks she has a husband and two daughter to take care of, but Nick tells her. Bridget comes to the hospital where Ruth is being treat with her youngest daughter. Bert is annoyed at Nick. After that, they come to Ruth's room, a doctor comes and tells they must move Ruth to the nursing home. That is the beginning of the problem.

Through this research, it is important to know what kind of love that we have when we decide to have a commitment with someone. By knowing the concepts of love, people will not be trapped in wrong relationship. The moral teaching of this research is if we see by Nobert Everhardt characters we can learn that when we are having a commitment, we are being responsible on our partner. Especially when are married to someone, we do not want to be irresponsible person. Love is commitment and accept your partner no matter what they are in better or worse, sickness and health till death do you part. That is the promise between two people. We get married to and promise our partner, their parents and most importantly God. But, if you need some help from another, you can not be stubborn like Nobert Everhardt is. If you need some help, then ask, not because of your stubbornness but due to get fact that your love is in danger.

According to this research, it is potential for the next research with other methods in sociology approach by analyzing the family crisis of the movie script. There are only a few journal and researches that discuss and analyze literature works by using the theory of love. This research can introduce about the theory of love and its application in literary works. This movie script What They Had is also still new by the time this research is conducted using the concept of the theory of love. It is still wide open to new possible findings that can be analyzed in this movie script.
