

CHAPTER 5

CONCLUSION

After analyzing the novel Killing Commendatore by Haruki Murakami through the intrinsic approach using characterization, plot and setting and the extrinsic approach using defense mechanisms. It come to the conclusion the novel Killing Commendatore can be analyzed using psychoanalysis. The result of the intrinsic approach and the extrinsic approach that the theme of the research is The Psychoanalysis of Main Characters Using Defense Mechanism in the Killing Commendatore novel by Haruki Murakami.

The Narrator and Wataru Menshiki are the two main characters in the novel Killing Commendatore. Both characters have different personalities. The Narrator is an idealist person who always stick to its principles especially for painting. He also a curious person who isn't afraid of investigating a strange bell sound in the forest in middle of the night, and wanted to meet with the famous painter, Tomohiko Amada, who is the painter of Killing Commendatore. And last, he is also a very trustworthy person which many characters in the novel have confidence on sharing their secret. The second character, Wataru Menshiki is a loner who lives alone in a huge mansion and doesn't have a family or even single friend. He is also a wealthy and flamboyant person who owns four sports car, have a broad range of skills, a guy who is a dream of many women and can be easily charmed by him. But last, he is a very secretive person who has a dark past with very little background and have endured grueling investigation by the Tokyo Police Department, and he has been watching a girl named Mariye Akikawa, who he suspect as his daughter with a high tech binoculars.

The concept of psychoanalysis used in Haruki Murakami's novel Killing Commendatore is the theory of defense mechanism. The theme that is proven using the intrinsic and extrinsic approach is The Analysis Using Defense Mechanism of The Main Characters in the Killing Commendatore novel by Haruki Murakami. It's proven using extrinsic approach, namely the theory of defense mechanism with an intrinsic approach through characterization, plot and setting.

The moral of this research is to know what type of defense mechanism to be used in the daily life to coping with anxiety or stress. Then also how to develop a better character through the life and become a mature person.

According to this research, there is a potential for the further research using another aspect of approaches and aspects of the novel as there only few research using this novel as basis. This research can also introduce other students to the factors of defense mechanism as another comparison with aim to be used to write a better analysis.

