After analyzing “Girl In The Basement” movie script through intrinsic approach and extrinsic approach. I conclude “Girl In The Basement” is related to intrinsic approach and extrinsic approach that I analyze. The intrinsic approach which consists of characterization by showing and telling methods, plot such as exposition, rising action, climax, falling action, and resolution. The last is setting which consist of setting as a background of the action, setting as an antagonist, setting as a means of creating an appropriate atmosphere and setting as a means of revealing characters. And also, The extrinsic approach which is understanding the concept of Social institution and understanding the concept and definition of Social deviation and Family institution deviation.

In extrinsic approach I use the concepts of Durkheim in a book entitled Sociology: Understanding and Changing the Social world In analyzing this movie script. I can conclude the concept that I analyze it can be used to analyze this movie script.

In conclusion, “Girl In The Basement” movie script theme is Deviation of family institution with sociology of literature approach. Where there are a lot of social deviation in this movie script and deviations from the functions of Family institution in this movie script. In this movie script, it is very clear about how deviation from family institution occurs. Where the character of Don is very immoral to the character of Sara.

The moral value in this research is that as a household leaders, biological fathers should not commit sexual violence and physical violence against their own biological children. This behavior deviates greatly from the functions of a family institution which is supposed to protect and provide comfort to the people in the family.

According to this study, further research has the potential to analyze “Girl In The Basement” movie script from chapter one to four through other approaches or concepts. This research can also introduce students of the Department of English
