

CHAPTER 5

CONCLUSION

In the previous chapter there was an analysis of the formulation of the problems that were interrelated in the movie script I'm Thinking of Ending Things by Charlie Kaufman and finally I was able to draw conclusions through psychological concepts using an intrinsic approach and an extrinsic approach.

After I analyzed this movie script, I can conclude that in analyzing the movie script I'm Thinking of Ending Things I can use an intrinsic approach. To understand some of the characterizations in this movie script, I use the show method. There are three characters that I analyzed, namely the Young Woman (Lucy), Jake and the Janitor. They relate to each other to connect this movie script and reveal how their characterizations are. The janitor is the main character who experiences delusions. The place, time and situation and conditions in this movie script really support this setting. In addition, to assist the characterization and setting, the plot in this movie script also plays an important role. In addition to determining the chronology of an event, explaining the events intended by the director and the main part of this movie script, a plot is needed.

In the main character that I analyze in this movie script, he has a disorder that can be called a delusional disorder. It is the character of the janitor who has the delusional disorder. With the appearance of a janitor, he suffers from this delusional disorder because he wants a love story the way he wants it. To analyze the delusional disorder that occurs in the main character, it is contained in the characterization, plot and setting. Finally, in some of the dialogues that I found in this movie script, I can prove the delusional disorder that occurs. In this movie script there is a problem at the beginning of the story in the form of a young woman who wants to end something. But, in fact, the young woman in question is either surreal or unreal. It is the result of delusions experienced by the cleaners. Then, in the middle of the story, a problem arises while at Jake's parents' house.

Strange things happened there. At the end of the story in this movie script, finally, the janitor, which is Jake, gets a medal at the Nobel Prize Ceremony.

Through the movie script, I'm Thinking of Ending Things by Charlie Kaufman, I learned about someone who really wants something, but in reality, he can't, it can cause serious problems for mental health. The form of delusion experienced by the janitor, in this case, is due to a strong sense of desire to have something that is not even possible to obtain. There are several plots and settings that also support the theme in the movie script I'm Thinking of Ending Things. The supporting plot is in the crisis section. Where it is the culmination of the problem in this movie script. Also, with a supportive setting found in the interior of Jake's parents' house. There, something strange began to happen.

In this research, I hope that I can provide knowledge about delusional disorder for those who are interested in things like this and can deepen their knowledge to be able to analyze delusional disorder in the characterization of the characters in this movie script. I also hope that this research can provide input as a source of information and ideas for further research.
