

CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION

1.1. Background of the Problem

Racism is a form of action a nation that feels superior to their country where they think that no other nation can be equal to them. There are various forms of racism and it can happen in many place. The forms of racism can be prejudice, discrimination or hatred directed at someone because of their skin colour, ethnicity or national origin. Many people think that harassment is a form of racism, but acts of violence or intimidation don't need to be involved. For example, in our social life we don't want to people from different countries or regions join us, we only remove that person from our group without resorting to violence.

Racism can be seen through the attitude or actions of the person, but not everything is clearly shown. For example, someone who sees a list of job applicants and decides to interview the person based on their surname. Racism is not just words, beliefs, and actions. It includes barriers that can prevent people from enjoying the enjoyment and equality of their race. Historically, racism was the heart of North American slavery system and the building of Western European empires in the 18th century. The idea of racial system was used with the aim of providing a considerable difference between people of African descent whose ancestors had been enslaved and transferred to America. African and African-American are considered inferior people which the followers of the slave system support and justify.

In United States, Asian-American has been claimed as threat to the country that promote white-only immigration policies. They are called "yellow peril" : unclean and unfit for citizenship in the United States based on website (Pbs:2020). In the late 19th century, white natives spread xenophobic propaganda about the impurity of Chinese in San Francisco. According to KBBi website, xenophobia means : " Feelings of hatred (fear, anxiety) towards strangers or something that is not yet known; hatred of the completely foreign. "

When Ip Man went to America to find a new school for his son son, he got many racism attitude that shown by white people there. American people seems can't accept people from another nation easily.
