I used the concept of humanistic from Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs as the reflection of Kevin Wendell Crumb's alter-personalities characters. The characterization, plot and setting of the movie support the concept of five level needs. After that, I elaborate between the intrinsic and extrinsic approaches to prove the theme of the research which is the reflection of Maslow's hierarchy of needs on Kevin Wendell Crumb's alter-personalities characters.

It is explained that Kevin Wendell Crumb's alter-personalities characters still reflect the hierarchy of needs that they hardly gets. Maslow believed that people possess a set of motivation systems unrelated to rewards or unconscious desires. In other words, the every people in the world, although he suffered certain of illness, is still have desire to complete they goal. As occurs in character Kevin Wendell Crumb and his alter-personalities, the Dissociative Identity Disorder they gets since he is young until now, making them into a goal that makes them fulfill their most potential ability as a person. As today, more and more cases like Kevin Wendell Crumb and his Dissociative Identity Disorder that we encounter in the real world. The lack of affection and abusive history from the parents

The moral teaching of the research is, every child in the world is born innocent and does not have any bad intention. The environment of their growing holds important roles in shaping them in the future. The environment is not only from the main family, but also their surroundings. Therefore, as the surrounding of the children, we need to create a world filled with love and attention to encourage the better development children's emotion. At the end of the movie, Kevin Wendell Crumb and his alter-personality is reach what they called with The Beast, the highest humanity evolution In order to proves their existence. It happens to Kevin because the problem he experiences is too big for him, moreover with no one who can support him passing the problem. Then he find his own way then comes the disorder which taking full controlled over him It shows us the importance of our support for the people around us, especially children. Understanding the characterization and psychology on the research, the readers can easily see the theme of the movie.
