

CHAPTER 5

CONCLUSION

After analysing this movie script We Have Always Lived in The Castle through intrinsic approach which consist of characterization, plot, setting, theme and tragedy and elaborating the result with extrinsic approach which consist of trauma. I can conclude that the movie script reflects trauma in the form of protective and fear and tragedy in the form of ruin and death.

Mary Catherine Blackwood or known as Merricat as the main character in this movie script suffers a trauma due to bad treatment from people surround, it impacts her to be more protective of what she consider hers and always fear of everything that she thinks will injuring her and to what she consider hers (her sister and her family inheritance). Her trauma impacted her in the form of she does not hesitate to injure and even kill people or things that she deems dangerous and threatening. She was even killed her father with poison because she considered that their father is a threat to Constance and her cousin Charles with stabbing him because she also considered he was a threat to Constance. This condition that Merricat suffer is make her and her sister Constance live in isolation, in order to reduced her fear of the cruel outside world.

Based on what I analyze in the previous chapters, I can conclude that the theme of this movie script is Trauma and Tragedy. The trauma felt by Merricat made her over protective of what her belong until make her isolated herself and her sister. Merricat did not hesitate to kill someone that she thinks will harm her belong and it lead to ruin and death. To understand the characterization of the character researcher used dramatic characterization that shows the main character suffering from trauma and tragedy.

Through this research, I can conclude that trauma experienced can impact the nature and actions to be taken next. We must pay attention to sufferers so as not to injure other people or ourselves by approaching and making friends with that person. The moral teaching of this research is to telling people that trauma due to bad treatment from people has impact of the cruel behaviour who could harm people who are considered threatening. The purpose of this research is to analyse the side effect behaviour of trauma such as harm to people that they think threatening and isolating.

According to this research, it is possible for further researchers to research this movie script, future researchers can examine more deeply about the psychology of the main character or antagonist. The results of this study can be a reference in analyzing We Have Always Lived in The Castle movie script using another approach. I hope it will be useful for future research and Is useful for who are interested in analyzing literary works using approaches used, because this research is carried out through psychological approach.
