ABSTRACT

This study aims to analyze the movie script through intrinsic and extrinsic approaches. The object of this research is the Just Mercy movie script. Through an intrinsic approach, the elements described focus on characterization, plot, and background. Meanwhile, for the extrinsic approach, I analyze racial discrimination through the theory of genetic structuralism. This research was conducted using a qualitative descriptive method. Furthermore, research on the main character is carried out by elaborating between intrinsic and extrinsic elements, as well as looking at the various types of acts of racial discrimination obtained by the main character through a genetic structuralism theory approach. The result of this study is that there are acts of racial discrimination such as verbal, non-verbal, and intimidation in the Just Mercy movie script. apart from that all these acts of racial discrimination are like bad history that keeps repeating itself.
