

CHAPTER 5

CONCLUSION

After analyzing the Clouds movie script by Karla Holden, using intrinsic and extrinsic approaches. Intrinsic approaches used in this research are characterization, plot, and setting. Extrinsic approaches used in this research are the psychoanalytic theory proposed by Abraham Maslow for the motivation and struggle to achieve dreams. The results of the intrinsic and extrinsic approaches prove that The Struggle And Motivation to Achieve Dreams of the main character in Clouds movie script is represented in this study. the movie Clouds does indeed showcase elements of Abraham Maslow's hierarchy of human needs theory in relation to the struggle and motivation to achieve dreams. Maslow's theory suggests that individuals have different levels of needs, starting from basic physiological needs and progressing towards self-actualization.

In the case of Zach Sobiech, the main character in the movie, his struggle with a terminal illness represents a significant challenge in his life. However, his motivation to achieve his dreams and make a lasting impact on the world drives him to overcome this adversity.

The movie illustrates how Zach's pursuit of his musical aspirations aligns with Maslow's theory. Despite facing the physiological and safety needs associated with his illness, Zach's focus on his passion for music reflects the need for self-actualization. He channels his energy into creating and performing his own songs, finding fulfillment and purpose in expressing himself through music.

Zach's unwavering determination, support from loved ones, and the pursuit of his dreams also align with Maslow's theory of belongingness and esteem needs. He seeks connections with his friends, bandmates, and family who provide him with emotional support and encouragement. The validation he receives from others for his talent and courage boosts his self-esteem and reinforces his motivation to pursue his dreams.

By demonstrating Zach's journey of self-actualization and the fulfillment of his dreams despite his struggle, the movie "Clouds" showcases the relevance of Maslow's theory in understanding the motivation and resilience of individuals in the face of challenges. It highlights the importance of pursuing one's passions, finding support, and striving for personal growth and fulfillment, even in the most difficult circumstances
